LOCAL NEWS.

FILES OF THE ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.-In reply to many inquiries which we receive on the subject, we will state that the bound volumes of the Alexandria Gazette, from 1800 to 1861, were fortunately preserved, and were not destroyed at the time the office was sacked and burned by an incendiary mob of soldiers, during what Gen. Slough, subsequently, officially declared was a "reign of terror" in this place. (We do not know but that "a reign of terror" was not occasionally experienced at a later period.) But the files had been removed to a private residence, and thus escaped the general wreck. Everything else, in the office, was utterly destroyed-the soldiers not allowing many articles, that could have been saved, to be removed. And, all this, without the slightest excuse or provocation, save the publication of the particulars of an outrage in a church, which hundreds had seen, and which were vouched for by some of our most respectable citizens under do Extra 11 25 @ 14 50 their own names. However, that has passed! de Family 15 00 @ 17 00 Still, memory will bring back that deed, and Grain, Wheat, White prime 2 60 @ 3 00 some of its "concomitants." The files of which we speak, thus saved, are always open for those of our citizens who may at any time wish to examine them, for reference, in law suits, for advertisements, for dates, marriages, deaths, or incidents or news, important to be recalled .-They contain a complete history of Alexandria for more than sixty years, besides being a valuable record of all public intelligence, foreign and domestic, during that period. We may turb anything appertaining thereto, and you mention, in this connexion, that previous to its incendiary destruction, a "military guard," for "protection," as it was facetiously said, had been placed in the office. This "guard," or their friends and associates, by their permission threw the types into what printers technically call "pi," broke the presses, and stole and carried off almost the whole of a valuable library. "Quis custodiet ipsos custodes?" A box of the books, marked on the fly leaves, with the names of the Brother Toms, Aunt thieves, was found afterwards, buried under an ash pile, in the yard of the office, where they had been secreted by these wretches, previous to their intended removal out of the State of AQUEDUCT .- It is remarked as a little curious that coal boats which have heretofore ways passed under that section of the bridge of the river and bay affords. This statement, which is over the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, without troubling the timber supports, seem to be unable, since the lease was given, to get through without running into the supports of pass, if they happen to be heavily loaded .-Wash. Star.

So biased are the feelings of certain people in Washington and Georgetown, and the material interests of this city are taken so much to heart, by those with whom an effort is being made by a limited and ill advised portion of James E. Waddy, the master mechanic, and the present residents of Alexandria, to, geographically-for no other way is possible-unite us, that some, even of the newspapers of those cities, when referring to Alexandria affairs, seem to go out of their path to avoid the publication of facts, and to take especial pains to assert what a single enquiry would inform them had no truthful foundation. The above extract contains an entire perversion of what really are the facts regarding the condition of the bridge over the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, and in order to correct impressions, likely to be produced by such published accounts, we state, on the authority of one of the lessees, that the supports of the bridge were knocked out before the lessees of the Alexandria Canal obtained their lease, and that the first work performed by them, after securing the lease, was, at their own expense, to reset and repair those supports; that the bridge has been, by them, and at their cost, kept in repair, and has sustained no injury whatever since they took charge of the work, and that boats are now passing under the bridge without any difficulty.

ALEXANDRIA LIBRARY.-We wish it were possible to revive the old Alexandria Library, and open its stores of learning, and good books collected in other days, for the instruction and improvement of those who have leisure to read, and who do not care so much about modern books or new publications. We suppose, however, from a statement made sometime ago, by the excellent President of the Library Company, that to open it now would not pay the ex pense of having a Librarian, and other necessary costs and charges. Its treasures, therefore, must be, for the present, in a measure sealed. Could it not be so arranged that responsible persons might procure books from the Library, at stated periods, to be returned, under an obligation, at a certain time? There are so many interesting associations and recollections connected with that Library, that we again before Justices Summers and Colton this dislike exceedingly to see it closed. The taste morning. Justice Summers was for committal, for reading which the writer of this paragraph | and Justice Colton for acquittal, and so a comhas, and which is a source of so much pleasure, was acquired and cherished in the Alexandria Library, when it was flourishing; and "hee studia juventutem alunt, senectutem ob-

CITY CEMETERIES.-We mentioned sometime ago that efforts were in progress tending to secure, by individual subscriptions, from the lot owners in the different grave yards, a sum of money sufficient to defray the expense of suitably enclosing the Cemeteries on the Southwestern limits of the city-the fences which formerly surrounded them having been destroyed during the war, by United States troops lo-A cargo of BROWNSTUFF, daily looked cated in that neighborhood. We understand that those having charge of the subscription list have, as yet, met with but poor success, owing to the searcity of money among those from whom the collections are to be made, but we sincerely trust the effort to effect such a laudable and desirable object will not be aban doned, but that a retrenchment, for a hitle while, in the expense of indulging in the season's luxuries, may render possible contributions otherwise unobtainable.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, ALEXANDRIA, June 21, 1866. JAMES F. WALSH, Sup't. of Night Watch:

Having failed to comply with the order issued from this office this morning and delivered to you at twenty-five minutes before nine o'clock, this is to inform you that you are suspended from all connection with the Night Watch from and after the time you receive this, and this is further to command you to deliver to the bearer, Joseph Padgett, the keys of the Watch House; and you are not to disare especially ordered not to visit the Watch House, other than as a private citizen, or the consequence be upon your own head.

RIVER FINES. - An impression prevails among the Captains of the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay Craft, that they are subject to a fine of $20 for retailing such products of the land and water as they may bring to this city for disposal. There is no section, clause, or paragraph in the laws of the Corporation containing any such provision, and we are requested by the Committee of the City Council, to whom was referred, for revision, the Revenue Law of the city, to state that no tax, fine, or license can be imposed upon the owners or captains of vessels or boats, for retailing, at our wharves, oysters, crabs, clams, fish, terrapins, turtles, or such marketable produce-poultry, vegetables, &c.,-as the country adjoining the shores we hope, will be sufficient to prevent the future tabooing of our city by the boatmen.
